

OPPORTUNITY: EXECUTIVE INTERVIEWER

Rivel is currently seeking a financially astute person to interview securities analysts and portfolio managers regarding publicly traded companies over the telephone. The position will be on a contract basis and requires refined executive interviewing skills, an ability to interact comfortably with demanding respondents over the course of 15 minute telephone interviews, probe their opinions as well as to be persistent and patient.

Since Rivel's interviewers are on the frontline directly with investment professionals, they are incredibly important to our success. By engaging investment professionals in a meaningful dialogue, the interviewers provide the most accurate, relevant and reliable data for Rivel to interpret and then deliver strategic guidance to its clients.

In addition to completing interviews, the interviewer will be responsible for transcribing their work. This is an excellent position for former investor relations professionals, business-to-business marketing research executives or those with interviewing experience with a particular emphasis on finance. Assignments will start on a trial basis and can increase with proven success.
